How the MTI works

The RCP assesses applicants from around the world against strict selection criteria, followed by face-to-face panel interviews with RCP representatives.

The RCP is responsible for facilitating registration at the General Medical Council and Tier 5 visa processes.

Successful candidates are placed in training posts throughout the UK for a fixed period of 24 months.

Benefits of the MTI for NHS trusts

Gaps in rotas can be filled by RCP-assessed medical graduates, avoiding the need for costly locums.

Highly motivated and well-qualified medical graduates from CMT level upwards are provided.

The initiative fosters links with hospitals around the world as medical graduates return to their countries with the knowledge and skills learnt at your trust.

The education of UK doctors is also broadened through exposure to different cultures and medical practices.

PROMISE 2016

Practice of medicine in a safe and effective way

Supporting European doctors in their transition to UK practice
7–8 April 2016
Royal College of Physicians, London

The transition to working in the NHS can be challenging for doctors: they must adjust to an unfamiliar training pathway and management structure, in addition to the demands of clinical practice in a new working environment.

The Royal College of Physicians (RCP) has developed the PROMISE programme to support European doctors who have recently started working in the UK or who plan to apply for an NHS post in the near future.

The inaugural course takes place in London on 7–8 April 2016 and will bring doctors from across Europe together with facilitators from the RCP, the General Medical Council and several NHS trusts. The varied programme is designed to develop doctors’ understanding of NHS systems and ultimately to improve the standard of care that patients receive.

Sessions will include:

> the structure of the NHS
> welcome to UK practice: ethical scenarios
> common acute medical problems in the UK
> sharing care with the community
> developing a career in medicine.
